SCREEN A SPIRIT

During the past year I have been on three TV programs; been on six talks that were on the radio network, and have had five articles written about my work in big time magazines. The name is Paul Henderson. Legally I am a private investigator, though now all my work is confined to investigation that best can be called, "Supernatural Conditions." Of Confucius four things were said by a great expert in the field: That Confucius had no foregone conclusions, no arbitrary predeterminations, no obstinacy, and no egoism. My pal and helper, Mike Cassini says this also applies to me.

One Thursday afternoon I received a telephone call from a Mr. Norman C. Sholdand, attorney-at-law. Would I be kind enough to come right over to his office? He wanted my services over the week end and would pay me well. So I drove over to his office at 265 Main Street. He was a muddle man. As he welcomed me, I sat down on a comfortable chair and he told me the situation.

"I have as a client a young man of twenty-two. Actually it was his grandfather, the late Edward Singer, who was my original client. Mr. Singer made his will and I am the executor. He left to his grandson his entire estate. It consists of a large old house in the country, and four thousand dollars a year as long as the grandson lives.

"Now let me tell you about the young man who is Thomas Singer. He went to college and wanted to study dentistry, but never made dental school. He likes to draw and paint, so he has fixed up a studio room and I figure he would be happy that way the rest of his life. No brilliant fellow but what you can call a good boy. Mr. Edward Singer set up a fund of two thousand dollars a year for me, to use as expense money to see that no harm ever comes to his grandson.

"When Thomas Singer was sixteen he claims his grandfather told him that he would someday give him a million dollars. That he had the money in cash and it would all be the boy's. All I can tell you about how Mr. Edward Singer earned money was that he once did trading in diamonds in the Far East. If he had that kind of money, it was in cash and not hidden where I could find it.

"About a month ago Thomas Singer told me he had a feeling that his grandfather was trying to communicate with him. The old man had a heart attack and died within five minutes. Never regained consciousness. Then two weeks ago Thomas Singer met an old man of seventy. His name is Philip Cousell. I checked on this man. He worked as a radio expert for two large companies and was retired. Also he is interested trying to get into contact with the spirit world. Mr. Cousell has built some kind of an apparatus which he claims can make contact with the spirits of people. This Saturday he is going to set it up in the house where my client lives. Now this may all be part of a game to get control of the young man. I don't know. You are the expert in this field. You come out with me and see just what is being done."

So Mike Cassini and I drove out with the lawyer to this country place. It certainly was an old house. I guess at the turn of the century it might have been a showplace. I met young Thomas Singer. When I met Philip Cousell it was easy. Because he knew all about me.

"I saw you on that TV program," he began. "You are doing a good job, and you know something about the world beyond. So let me show you what I have built."

We soon went downstairs to the basement.

here was a room where probably conferences once were held. A big old mahogany table was in the center of the room. On this table was a lot of stuff that reminded you of a ham's radio room and a little glass screen.

"We know that radar can pick up the presence of an object that cannot be see by the human eye. This is the basic principle that I have used in building this device. If the spirit of the late Mr. Edward Singer is around it will appear on the screen. You will all be able to see it. But there is a personal connection between myself and the apparatus.

I claim that I am sensitive to the presence of spirits from the world beyond. Also that I have from time to time communicated with them. All that this device does is to magnify my special sensitivity. It would not work for any other person."

To me that last sentence sounded a bit fishy. I had heard it before from other "mediums." For essentially this old man was telling us that he was a "medium" who could make contact with spirits. Only he was using scientific apparatus instead of a sounding board or a knocking table to convey thoughts. He asked us all to sit down which we did. Then the lights were dimmed. He spoke into a small microphone.

"I am calling the spirit of Edward Singer. I am certain you must be around. I wish to help your grandson. You promised him a million dollars in cash, but you did not tell him where you hid it. You loved your grandson very much. I am getting nothing for this. Nor would I take anything from him. I repeat to you. I wish to help your grandson. Please communicate at once with me."

Our eyes were glued to the little screen which glowed in the darkened room. Suddenly we all saw the outline of a human being on it. From the mouth of Philip Cousell came a deep heavy voice.

side the house. You just all remain here I will

"I am a friend of Edward Singer. He is our summon him. I know about his grandson. He wants him to get the money."

Then the outline vanished from the screen. And we waited for several minutes. Then there were two outlines on the screen. That same deep heavy voice came from the mouth of Philip Cousell.

"I have come with my friend. He is unable to speak. But he will give me his thoughts and I will speak them for him."

Brother, at this moment I felt like jumping up and turning on the lights. And shouting, "You big faker! What are you trying to do? You never heard the voice of the late Edward Singer. So you can't imitate it. The grandson would spot any attempt as a fake at once."

But I restrained myself. There was more to come and I wanted to give the old man all the rope he needed. The voice of the "friend" continued speaking.

"The money is here . . .". That was all that was said. There was something like a blurred patch on the screen. Then a peculiar noise from the mouth of Mr. Philip Cousell. Something definitely was wrong. I jumped up and turned on the lights. I didn't have to be an expert to know he was having a heart attack. We did everything we would for him. Called the nearest hospital. They arrived quickly and tried their best. His last words were to Thomas Singer.

"You got the message."

Of course I was very much bothered by what had happened. I wanted to have that stuff check out by some radio experts. So next week I got permission from the attorney to come up with three experts. These fellows knew their stuff. And they went over that collection of tubes and other things from A to Z. Dr. Richard Pettlock gave me the decision.

"Actually this is a working model of a small radar. Good only for about a distance of twenty feet. If you saw something then it was picked up on the screen. No way in which those images could have been faked."

Cold sweat dropped from my forehead. Then this fellow was on the level. But he had pointed out a limitation. It would only work with him. However when I told this to Dr. Pettlock he told me the obvious.

"It could have been your outlines that were on the screen. Come I will show you."

He did just that I felt a bit better. It was a fake all along. The grandson watched us with interest. The men were paid and I got my fee. There was a peculiar smile on the face of Thomas Singer. As though he was inwardly chuckling to himself.

"Something on your mind?" I remarked.

"Sure," he snapped back. "You think that the old man was a faker, so you paid no attention to the mention. Did it ever dawn upon you that he had screened a spirit? That it could all be on the level. The message was definite. It said the money was here. But where was here? The machine was on the table. So I got underneath the big table. Sure enough! There were envelopes glued to the bottom side of the table. I opened them and they contained one thousand one thousand dollars bills. Makes a million dollars. And in the last envelope was a message: For my grandson."

Now you figure it out! Was it all really contact with the spirit world? Or just a coincidence? I don't know the answer. Maybe you do.
